

You know that summer has ended when the streets around the island empty out, tourists are seen on the weekends only, and things slow down a bit. The weather cools off, and Mother Nature gears up for one of her most spectacular seasons.

Students and staff return to their normal routines of homework, grading, and another year of high quality education at Kelleys Island School. The 2008-2009 school year was no exception. Early September kicked off another 9 months of inspiration, guidance, coaching, and cooperation within the walls located at 528 Division Street.

Our school is extremely technologically advanced, proudly boasting a 1-to-1 student-to-computer ratio, interactive whiteboards in every classroom, and staff members who seek out professional development opportunities so they can effectively use the technology available. Students in the upper grades learn about hardware and software applications, including digital cameras, video, and web design. High School students utilize laptops issued to them by the school to complete much of their schoolwork. Younger students use classroom computers and portable digital word processors to develop basic keyboarding skills as well as to enhance their in-class language arts studies.

We are more than an island, more than a school...we have a close-knit community that works with the school to help our youngest islanders achieve success and realize their goals.

Scattered throughout this Year-In-Review you'll find inspirational quotes by many well known leaders. We all want to succeed, and our job as a school is to help our students spread their wings and soar.

I like the dreams of the future better than the history of the past.
